Community Policing

Please explain how COPS funding has enhanced your agencies ability to implement community policing activities. (2,000 characters or less).

The Stockton Police Department uses CHRP funds to enhance community policing efforts focusing on three key elements: Community Partnerships, Problem Solving, and Organizational Transformation.

As the Police Department downsizes and faces a significant reduction in sworn staff, the City of Stockton has counted on support from the COPS Office to help maintain community partnerships; most notably with the five local school districts, Downtown business alliance, neighborhood betterment committees, and allied government agencies and task forces; dedicating Officers to specific community policing activities to develop solutions and increase trust and cooperation with participants.

With CHRP staff, the Police Department can engage in a generalist approach to community policing by incorporating sound problem solving practices into routine Patrol assignments rather than relying on a few "specialist" problem solvers. All Officers are encouraged to go beyond traditional Police responses and commit to problem solving and identifying conditions that contribute to crime and neighborhood disorder. Responses will be tailored in concert with community members to effectively reduce or eliminate crime problems.

The Police Department recognizes the current economic crisis as an opportunity to reorient, restructure, and reengage in a new era of community policing and problem solving using the best practices that have evolved nationally over the past 20 years. Organizational transformation will occur as the Department moves forward (with fewer managers, mid-managers, and line staff), reexamines the mission statement and strategic plan, and institutionalizes the practice of community policing agency-wide by using a broad range of community resources involving both public and private partnerships. A more enlightened, empowered, and emancipated citizenry will emerge embracing the community policing philosophy of a personalized partnership with Police.

The questions in this section refer to the grant number(s) identified below and how it may have increased agency's community policing capacity.
